FROM THE PRESIDENT

EUNICE ROBINSON #112, PRESIDENT@BCGS.CA

I hope you will join us for our Zoom Christmas meeting! Unfortunately we won't have Susan Snalam's delicious English Trifle, or the wonderful home baking, but maybe we can all have some of our own goodies to munch on while we enjoy the meeting.

We have had some great entries for the Most Improved Genealogy Contest. The winners will be announced at our December meeting.

The last few Coffee Chats have been well attended, and the conversations have been really interesting. Sometimes we do wander beyond the borders of the country at hand! We'll take a break from the Coffee Chats until the middle of January – but do consider joining us in the new year.

Recently, I was browsing through some older journals and was reminded that many of the older issues contain information that is just as pertinent now as it was then, items like passenger lists or articles on specific areas. Two journals that I'd like to mention are – French Canadian & Acadian Genealogical Review and the Heritage Review from the Germans from Russia Heritage Society.

There was a great article on the History of Saint Joseph's Parish, Burlington, Vermont in the 1980 French Canadian & Acadian Review, Vol. VIII No 1-2. The article is a must read if your people were from this area. The September 1998 Heritage Review Vol 28 #3, provides St. Peters Lutheran Church Records from Krem, North Dakota. If you have anyone from this area, check it out.

BCGS exchanges our digital journal with about 100 other societies, so don't overlook their current and back issues – they're always worth reading. If we don't have a journal from your area of research/interest, let us know, and we can approach those organizations about exchanging publications. If you have back issues of journals that you no longer want, consider donating them to the BCGS Library for others to enjoy.

Until next month, happy researching!

Merry Christmas & Happy New Year

CHRIS PATON

THE EVER-POPULAR CHRIS PATON DELIVERED TWO TALKS AT OUR FALL SEMINAR SERIES ON OCTOBER 29TH.

JANICE GRAF #5382

Chris' first talk was titled Tracing Your Irish Ancestors Through Land Records. Most researchers with Irish ancestry are delighted to find new ways to supplement the limited BMD resources available for Ireland, and Chris' review of the history of land ownership in Ireland and his numerous links to sources and repositories will keep many of us busy for some time. Chris has had considerable experience with Irish records and is very knowledgeable about this subject – his latest book Tracing Your Irish Family History Through Land Records is available from Pen & Sword books and Amazon.

In his second talk, Scottish Marriage: Instantly Buckled for Life, Chris took a detailed look at the various forms of marriage that have historically existed in Scotland, from church marriages to more informal (but ultimately legal) arrangements such as handfast marriages, marriages by habit and repute and irregular marriages. He also entertained us with tales of various marriage traditions in Scotland such as the penny scramble and drinking from wedding cogs.

Chris is both knowledgeable and entertaining – a great combination for a speaker. We had an excellent turnout of about 90 people and judging by the comments in the chat, everyone thoroughly enjoyed his talks.

Our condolences to longtime member Marilyn Ponting (#3929) on the recent passing of her husband, Alan George Ponting
30 March 1942—
3 November 2022

Husband, Dad, Grandpa, Great Grandpa & friend

MEG MCLAUGHLIN, #3847
GENEALOGY BLOGGER

Recently the juxtaposition of few ideas brought my 3 x great grandfather, Thomas Arment, to mind. The archeology program Digging for Britain, did a segment on the discovery of buried bodies on Burrow Island in Portsmouth Harbour. They were the remains of convicts who had died aboard the prison hulks. Was Thomas among them? The retirement question in "What Are Your Memories", also brought him to mind. I have written documentation about what he was doing the last years of his life. In the late 1840's, retirement wasn't really a thing for the working classes.

After his arrest, Sarah, his wife wrote the first petition on behalf of her husband, Thomas, and their son, Thomas. The elder man, she said, was of "advanced age" (67) and "in a very precarious state of health". Then, to illustrate what a respectable character he was, she added that her husband was "for upwards of 20 years in the Employ of Mr. Cobley, formerly of Essex Street, Whitechapel an extensive + respectable Town Carman and whose service your Petitioners husband left about eight years ago and he has since carried on a small business as a Greengrocer and retailer of Coals".

From that description, it looked like the elder Thomas was in a precarious financial position. Easy then, to be tempted by gains from flogging purloined merchandise. Receiving stolen goods was the charge laid against both Thomases. The sentence, after a trial in which neither accused gave evidence, was transportation. While the younger Thomas was transferred among prisons on land while awaiting his passage to Australia, the elder man, rather cynically I thought, was sent to the hulks. Death rates on those unseaworthy ships was high. For a man in poor health, the result was inevitable.

CRIMES, DEATHS AND MYSTERIES

Sarah's petition to the Secretary of State for the Home Department

What of the family left behind? The younger Thomas took over petition writing from his mother. In fact, I was able to figure out when the elder man died by when Thomas took to blaming his father as the instigator of their crime. The petitions don't seem to have changed anything and Thomas the younger was eventually transported to Australia.

When Sarah Arment's husband and son were jailed in 1849, the males in the household were no longer contributing to the family's support. At the time that she wrote her pleas for leniency to the Home Department, she was staying with Nicholas Cayzer in Waterloo Town, Bethnal Green. But many of the character witnesses who signed the petition gave addresses as streets in Goodmans Fields or Tenter Grounds, where the Arments had lived previously.

Where did Sarah go after the petition failed? Perhaps she moved in with her son, George. He may have needed help with his son, William, given the health of his wife, Sophia, who died in March of 1850, at the age of 38. Her death was determined to be natural, accelerated by excessive drink. George died later that same year, aged 35. That death was ruled as accidental.

He was a carman who ended up crushed between two sugar hogsheads.

An unlucky family, one might think, but Sarah had another son, James Arment, my 2 x great grandfather. The 1851 census showed her living with him and his family. But George and Sophia's son, William, was not in that household. I found him in Bexley, Kent, at Hall Place School. According to an advertisement for the school, it was a place of education for "the sons of professional men and private gentlemen" with "moderate terms". Still, even if the school fees were moderate, where had the Arments, a family seemingly down on their luck, come up with the funds to send young William away to school? It makes me wonder. It's one of the many mysteries in my family's history I would like to solve.

An exhibit of a trial from that era

WOULD YOU SHARE SOME OF THEIR EXPERIENCES AND TALES?

NAVY + WREN STORIES

Last week, in our local newspaper’s Remembrance Day edition, I stumbled across an article about a WREN who was also a ventriloquist. Sheila Margaret Kidd and her dummy, named Spike Ryan, performed in many WW II Meet the Navy shows on Vancouver Island, across Canada and in Europe. Miss Kidd’s career continued for some years after she was discharged, and Spike now resides at the CFB Esquimalt Naval and Military Museum, in a display about the service of the WRENS during the war.

My aunt served in the Women’s Royal Canadian Naval Service, and did share some stories about her time in the service. I need to spend some time gathering more information about her, and possibly gather more pictures and stories from those years.
